THE VERDICT IS IN

Recently our speaker series committee invited Todd Logan the playwright of Defamation to speak to us about this extremely thought-provoking play being presented on-stage at the BIG ARTS Herb Strauss Theater, Sanibel. Todd said, “That this play was not one that he intended to write but that a personal experience brought his attention to the differences in the way people look at the world”. This got him thinking about his own preconceived ideas about many things in general; class, religion, gender, where people lived, and a plethora of other influences on his unconscious thought processes. This was the seed from which grew this amazing play. Preconceived notions of race, class, ethnicity, and religion can color our observations of the world around us. The ideas we carry around with us are not always actual truths. All of us are guilty of some form of prejudice.

The play Defamation is presented as a courtroom drama; an African American woman is suing a Jewish real estate developer for Defamation of Character. That premise alone can stimulate preconceived thought activity toward one side or the other in this case. That is exactly what Todd wants to examine. Todd said, “Watching the testimony in this case and observing the lawyers questioning the witnesses is like a tennis match...point one side and point other side”. What is the actual truth and what is the perceived truth and why? The twist is that the audience is sitting as the jury and they will be voting on the verdict. After the verdict is rendered the audience gets a chance to engage with the playwright and actors in a discussion about the play and why this verdict may have been reached. Sounds like a great evening of theater to me, so buy your tickets now. After the Arts and Crafts Fair, Rotary will be planning a social evening at the theater to see Defamation. Why not do the same with your friends? recently our speaker series committee invited Todd Logan the playwright of Defamation to speak to us about this extremely thought-provoking play being presented on-stage at the BIG ARTS Herb Strauss Theater, Sanibel. Todd said, “That this play was not one that he intended to write but that a personal experience brought his attention to the differences in the way people look at the world”. Actually, the way he looked at the world. This got him thinking about his own preconceived ideas about many things in general; class, religion, gender, where people lived, and a plethora of other influences on his unconscious thought processes. This was the seed from which grew this amazing play. Preconceived notions of race, class, ethnicity, and religion can color our observations of the world around us. The ideas we carry around with us are not always actual truths. All of us are guilty of some form of prejudice and our personal truths can be slightly segued.
